PERSONAL STATEMENT

Scholar, Researcher, University Teacher, Administrator and Development Expert. I hold a Ph.D. in Communication and Media Studies and a Master of Arts in Communication, Media and Culture, from Anglia Ruskin University, Cambridge, United Kingdom, with a second Master's in Development Studies and Policy Analysis from Kaduna State University. My first degree was in Mass Communication, from Ahmadu Bello University, Zaria. I have been involved in knowledge creation, impartation and educational administration and management across institutions, leading to consequential experiences in the development of abilities, coupled with coterminous exposures in development and policy formulation and analysis endeavours through consultancies. My skills as a trainer, capacity-building facilitator, and knowledge management expert are also unmistakable, even while in the middle of growing earlier identified capabilities. These multivariate experiences have prepared me not only as a change driver, capable of integrating understanding Education and Communication, but as a professional who is eager to explore other frontiers and horizons and contribute to solving contemporary issues in these mutually exclusive yet interdependent fields. I am open to opportunities and new challenges for a further exemplification of my skills in pedagogy, cutting-edge research, educational management, and policy analysis for improved teaching and learning in Nigeria's education and communication ecosystem.
